Rueda Region
DO Rueda is centred around the town of Rueda in Castilla y León, about 170km north-west of Madrid and just to the south-west of the city of Valladolid. Geographically, Rueda spans the three provinces of Valladolid, Segovia and Avila and sits in the depression formed by the Duero river valley in the middle of the meseta central, Spain's high central plateau characterised by flat fields of cereal crops stretching as far as the eye can see and interspersed with vineyards. With 20,000 hectares of vineyard, Rueda is one of Spain's larger DOs - though still a way off Rioja which has just over 50,000 Ha - and with around 75 registered wineries you can see that Rueda producers tend to be slightly larger scale (particularly compared to a wine region like Galicia, for example, where plots are much smaller).

Winemaker
In 1994 an exciting new era for Rueda was dawning. It was in that year that a Frenchman, Didier Belondrade, living at the time in Nava del Rey, released a wine that was to change the shape of things to come for the Verdejo grape. This wine was Belondrade y Lurton -a Verdejo, fermented and aged on its lees; an elegant wine, harmoniously integrated in oak, and expressing the complexity offered by the different terroirs in which it was grown.

Tasting Notes
Crisp notes of Granny Smith apples, toasty aromas and zestful lemon undertones, interwoven with a faint fragrance of white blossoms. On the palate, a velvety texture balanced with acidity

Food pairing: Wild cod, miso honey eggplant, grilled carabinero, rossejat. For guests who like balanced oak with mineralogy. Chablis drinkers
